

By the King,

A P R O C L A M A T I O N

For the more effectual Reducing and Suppressing of PIRATES and PRIVATEERS in AMERICA.

JAMES R.

Whereas frequent Robberies and Piracies have been, and are daily committed by great numbers of Pirates and Privateers as well on the Seas as on the Land of and in America, which hath occasioned a great prejudice and obstruction to the Trade and Commerce as well of Our Subjects, as of the Subjects of Our Allies, and hath given a great Scandal and Disturbance to Our Government in those Parts. And whereas We being resolved to take some effectual course for the putting an end to all such Outragious Insolencies, have therefore thought it requisite to send a Squadron of Ships into the Parts aforesaid, under the Command of Our Trusty and Wellbelov'd Servant Sir Robert Holmes, Knight, Our Governour of Our Isle of Wight, and have otherwise given him all necessary Powers for Suppressing of the said Pirates and Privateers, either by force, or assurance of Pardon, and have Constituted and Appointed the said Sir Robert Holmes Our Sole Commissioner in that Affair: Now to the end that this Our Royal Purpose may be the better put in Execution, and that none of the said Offenders may have any cause of excuse or pretence left for wanting themselves from their said wicked and piratical courses for the future: We are Graciously pleas'd hereby to Proclaim and Declare, That in case any such Pirate or Privateer Pirates or Privateers shall within the space of Twelve months next ensuing the Date of this Our Proclamation, either in Person, or by their Agents Surrender, or become obliged to Surrender him or themselves unto the said Sir Robert Holmes, or any other person or persons appointed by him, or such other person or persons as in case of his Death shall be further Constituted and Appointed by Us, within any of Our said Islands, Plantations, Colonies, or other Places on the Sea or Land, lying between the Tropiques of Cancer and Capricorn in America, and in case any Pirate or Privateer, Pirates or Privateers shall within the space of fifteen months next ensuing the Date of these Presents, Surrender, or become obliged to Surrender him or themselves to the said Sir Robert Holmes, or any others Appointed as aforesaid, in any other parts of America, or within Our Kingdom of England, and shall give sufficient Security to be approved of by the said Sir Robert Holmes, or in case of his Death, by such other person or persons as shall be further Appointed by Us, for his or their future good Behaviour; We will, upon such humble Submission, and after such Security given, Grant unto such Pirate or Privateer, Privateer or Privateers, Our Gracious, full and Ample Pardon for all Piracies or Robberies committed by him or them upon the Sea or Land before the Date of these Presents. And We do hereby straightly Charge and Command all and singular Our Admirals, Vice-Admirals, Chief Governours, Captains, Commanders, Mariners, Seamen, and all Our Officers and Ministers of and in all and every Our said Islands, Plantations, Colonies, and Territories whatsoever, and of all and every Our Ships of War and other Vessels, and all other Our Officers and Subjects whatsoever, not only to be Aiding, Favouring and Assisting in their several Places and Stations, unto the said Sir Robert Holmes, and such other person or persons as shall be appointed as aforesaid in and for the more effectual Reducing and Suppressing of all manner of Pirates and Privateers within the Limits and Parts aforesaid, or any of them, but also (upon the producing a Certificate or Instrument under the Hand and Seal of the said Sir Robert Holmes, or such other person as in case of his Death shall be further Appointed by Us, signifying that any Pirate or Privateer, Pirates or Privateers hath or have Surrendered him or themselves unto the said Sir Robert Holmes, or such other person or persons appointed as aforesaid, and given Security for their future good Behaviour according to the Tenor of these Presents) to permit and suffer the said person or persons lawfully to Pass and Travel either by Sea or Land, without any Let, Hindrance or Molestation whatsoever, to or from any of Our said Islands, Plantations or Colonies, or into Our Kingdom of England, as soon as conveniently may be, in Order to his or their receiving Our full and Gracious Pardon as aforesaid, and that in the mean time no Indictment, Process, or other Proceeding shall be had in any of Our Courts of Record, or elsewhere, against any such person or persons producing such Certificate or Instrument, for any Piracy or Robbery by him or them committed as aforesaid, before the Date of these Presents. Provided always, That if any of the said Offender or Offenders whatsoever shall after the Publishing of this Our Proclamation, in contempt thereof and of Our Princely Mercy and Clemency to them hereby offered, wilfully and obstinately persist in their Piracies, Robberies and Outragious Practices, or shall not Surrender themselves in manner aforesaid; Then We do hereby expressly Direct and Command, That all and every such person and persons shall be pursued with the utmost Severity, and with the greatest Rigour that may be, until they and every of them be utterly Suppressed and Destroyed; We Declaring it to be Our Royal Purpose and Resolution, That they and every of them shall from thenceforth be finally Excluded and Debarred from receiving any further Favour or Mercy. And lastly We do hereby Revoke, Annul and make void all Proclamations by Us formerly Issued touching the Premises herein above mentioned, or any of them.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall this Twentieth Day of January, 1687. In the Third Year of Our Reign.

FLORIDA AND THE CIRCUM-CARIBBEAN

The land that today comprises the state of Florida belonged to Spain longer than it has been part of the United States of America. At one time not only Florida, but all of southeastern North America, including the islands of the West Indies, were claimed by Spanish monarchs. In the centuries following 1492, not only Spain but England, France, and Holland also sought colonies within that large region, an expanse in which hundreds of Native American tribes had been living for as long as fourteen millennia (and where sovereign Indian nations continue to hold lands today).

If nothing else, the history of southeastern North America is one of transformation. The region and its people are molded by that past. Anyone setting out to understand the social history of the sea islands of Georgia and South Carolina, the economic success of the Miccosukee Indians in southern Florida, or the importance of sugar cane production to the Caribbean would do well to be acquainted not only with the events of the past century or two, but also with those of the centuries that came before. The present evolves from the past.

To understand that past one must rely on such archival materials as are found in the Kislak Collection at the Library of Congress. One can find in it accounts of early sixteenth-century Spanish entradas into southeastern North America, including unprecedented information on the American Indians who were living there. The fortunes, and sometimes misfortunes, of colonists from France and Great Britain, who competed with Spanish settlers to conquer the land and its resources, are chronicled in still other letters and documents.

The Collection includes scores of other documents as well, including many that reveal the sometimes reprehensible nineteenth-century actions of the United States of America to wrest Florida from Spain and displace the ancestors of the Seminole and Miccosukee Indians living there. Just as European monarchies and the Native Americas vied for ascendancy on the North American mainland, so did they compete in the West Indies. Today English, French, and Dutch along with Creole languages are spoken there, a reflection of past events.

One cannot overestimate the intellectual value of these documents, centuries old, that connect us to the actuality of the past. Yet, there is another reason archival materials such as these in the Kislak Collection are to be valued. They are thrilling to behold. Here, for example, is a nearly three-hundred-year-old report describing St. Augustine, prepared by an Englishman, perhaps a spy intent on helping his country oust the Spaniards (see entry 633). The streets he maps in the report are thoroughfares in the town to this day.

The first part contains the Relación, which is a much expanded version of a report published in 1542. The Relación records the first journey by Europeans across North America. The second part, the Comentarios, which first appears in this publication, is the history of Cabeza de Vaca's governorship of the Río de la Plata colony (now Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay) in 1540–1543. It is the first printed narrative of inland exploration of the South American continent. The Comentarios were written by Cabeza de Vaca's secretary, Pero Hernández, and are preceded by an introduction by Cabeza de Vaca.

Carrillo de Albornoz was a Spanish army commander. Under the 1729 Treaty of Seville, the British had agreed not to trade with the Spanish colonies. To verify the treaty, the Spanish were permitted to board British vessels in Spanish waters. After one such incident in 1731, Robert Jenkins, captain of the ship Rebecca, claimed that the Spanish coast guard had severed his ear and, in 1738, exhibited it to the House of Commons. The British declared war on October 23, 1739. The war was marked by several unsuccessful British invasions of Florida and of the Spanish Main.

THE ADAMS-ONÍS TREATY

Correspondence concerning Adams's efforts to ensure Spanish ratification of the Adams-Onís or Transcontinental Treaty, by which the United States acquired all of East Florida, Spain renounced all claims to Oregon, the southern border of the United States was fixed at the Sabine River, and U.S. possessions extended westward along the 42nd parallel to the Pacific Ocean.

Unable to effectively administer their colonial possessions, Spain found it increasingly difficult to prevent raids on U.S. settlements by Florida's Seminole Indians. In response, the American government authorized Andrew Jackson's campaigns against the Seminoles, which resulted in Jackson's unauthorized punitive expedition into Florida in 1818. In the diplomatic furor that ensued, Adams initiated negotiations with Spanish ambassador Luis de Onís y Gonzales and on February 22, 1819 signed the preliminary articles.

A minor flaw in the treaty provisions, relating to two recent grants in Florida, forced negotiations to be reopened. Then, before ratification could be completed, Ferdinand VII was deposed in January 1820, placing the entire treaty in jeopardy. The nullification of the land grants in Florida became the pretext by which ratification was postponed. In this fascinating group of letters, Adams determinedly presses the new Spanish ambassadors to complete the process of ratification and emphatically rejects the king's request for a new treaty.

774. A SPANISH GALLEON WRECK, 1622
Silver fork, spoon, plate, and gold bullion from the 1622 Nuestra Señora de Atocha wreck.
KISLAK CA 0001–0004

In early September 1622, the Nuestra Señora de Atocha, a galleon carrying tons of Spanish treasure, was wrecked on the Florida coral reefs near the Dry Tortugas, leaving only five survivors. These items were recovered from the site of the wreck. During the centuries of Spanish exploration and colonization, treasure fleets made regular trips to the Americas to deliver merchandise and collect treasure and precious metals. In late summer, merchant ships would join their protectors, the war galleons, in Havana to form the treasure fleet for the return to Spain. Often, however, ships were scattered because of bad weather, poor seamanship, or piracy.

KISLAK MS 206

Pedro Menéndez de Avilés was the first governor of Spanish Florida. In the age of piracy on the high seas, sailing instructions were top-secret documents upon which rested the security of the king's fleet and his treasure. Here, Menéndez de Avilés, first governor of Spanish Florida, gives Don Cristóbal de Eraso complicated and detailed instructions for sailing to Spain on the Buenaventura with his fleet, via the islands of Flores and San Miguel. He is admonished not to proceed beyond a designated rendezvous without further instructions from Menéndez “under penalty of paying with his person and his property for any injury to his Majesty or his royal treasury.” With notary's signed statement of delivery to Eraso on 21 July 1572.

6 pages. In Spanish.
KISLAK MS 217

Lope Díez de Aux de Armendáriz, marqués de Cadereyta, was a Spanish admiral and later the first American-born viceroy of New Spain (1635–1640). This document relates to his distinguished career in command of naval convoys escorting treasure ships from the Indies to Spain.

BOAZIO, BAPTISTA, FL. 1588–1606 (see entry 279)
Map and Views Created to Illustrate Bigges' and Croftes' Summarie and True Discourse of Sir Frances Drake's West Indian Voyage . . .
London: Richard Field, 1589.

1 map and 4 bird's-eye views. Hand colored.
Voyage map in English; city maps in Latin.

Italian artist Baptista Boazio created these engravings to accompany A Summarie and True Discourse of Sir Francis Drake's West Indian Voyage, published in London by Biggs and Croftes in 1588–1589.
G3291.S12.B6

The Boazio maps are historically important for understanding Sir Francis Drake's (1540?–1598) activities. In 1585 Drake's fleet of twenty-three ships sailed from England to Ribeira Grande in the Cape Verde Islands, off the coast of West Africa. The voyage map shows Europe, western Africa, northern South America, and eastern North America, and the four bird's-eye views are the first printed views of the cities of Santiago, in the Cape Verde Islands, Santo Domingo, Cartagena, and St. Augustine, Florida. The views include detailed graphic accounts of the English attacks on the Spanish settlements and fascinating details—animals, flags, crests, and compasses—are used to decorate the cartography.

1 volume, 115 pages. In Spanish.

KISLAK MS 1024

Palafox y Mendoza was appointed bishop of the Puebla de los Ángeles and visitador general of México in 1639; supported by Pope Innocent X in disputes with Jesuits, he returned to Spain in 1649, was revered as a saint, and died in 1659. His beatification process began in 1694 with canonization pursued in the eighteenth century. The case was left undecided, owing to conflicting views regarding his standing with the Jesuits and toward the church (as reflected in this documentation).
